

Stakeholder Engagement

Engaging stakeholders can be one of the most challenging but rewarding groups to develop!

We have vast experience of engaging and empowering stakeholders.

This has been the catalyst for our development of the Helping HANDS programme.

What is Helping HANDS?

Hand-Holding

Helping the stakeholder understand why their involvement in the process is so important.

Assisting

Guiding them to the correct solutions while ensuring that they have full input in decision making.

Nurturing

Making sure that the stakeholder never feels 'let down' by the process.

Developing

Ensuring that the stakeholder feels real value from the role they are undertaking and can use their learning somewhere else.

Sustaining

Learning from mistakes, adapting continual improvement strategies and generally helping stakeholders remain involved in your strategies.

These are all the things that we believe are imperative for your stakeholders to fulfil their full potential - invite us to present how Helping HANDS can help you engage and empower your stakeholders - it won't just be them who benefits!

“We really felt as though the Contractors were taking us seriously. The training that was given to us in tender evaluation, site visits and interviews gave us the confidence to fully take part in the whole procurement process - something we wouldn't have done previously”
